St John's College Library, Oxford

Provenance names found in printed books

Sometimes the provenance of a document or book, rather than its content, is of importance to a researcher. Since its foundation, the library has received invaluable donations: gifts of single manuscripts and books and gifts or bequests of entire collections. For every physical volume published before 1820, the names of former owners and donors, the names of dedicatees, names found on booksellers' and bookbinders' labels, names found on bookplates and paste-ins, and names related to ephemera found enclosed with printed books, are recorded as a matter of course. For books published between 1821 and 1850, and for modern books in special collections, it is at the cataloguer's discretion whether to catalogue according to antiquarian or modern standard. For further information, please consult the OLIS cataloguing manual for antiquarian materials.

The following collections were catalogued fully to antiquarian standard:

- Early printed books (bibliographic record & copy-specific notes)
- Livres d'artiste & Private press editions (bibliographic record & copy-specific notes)

The following collections were catalogued partially to antiquarian standard:

- Ivor Bulmer-Thomas collection of Greek Mathematics and Science (copy-specific notes)
- Books previously owned by Robert Graves & enclosed ephemera (copy-specific notes)
- Books previously owned by A.E. Housman & Housman-related works from other provenances & enclosed ephemera (copy-specific notes)

Strings of text in copy-specific notes can be searched via OLIS and SOLO. However, Oxford University's current library management does not index copy specific notes. This means that one cannot browse an index of provenance names. In order to maximise access to our holdings, we record provenance names in a separate file until the arrival of a new library management system. The file attached here is a "snapshot" from July 2009 (the database is growing daily).
